Saturday Evening.

BY H. WHITNEY.

The week is past—the Sabbath day comes on; Rest—rest in peace—the daily toll is done; And standing as they stand, on the brink Of what is gone, is now, and soon shall be, As one that trembles in eternity.

For such as this now closing week is past,

So much advancing time will close my last;

Such as to narrow all the awful light

Of the eternal morning half my sight;

Spirit of good! on this week's verge I stand,

Tracing the guiding influence of Thy hand;

That hand which leads me gently, calmly still,

Up life's dark, stormy, treacherous, thorny hill.

Then, though in every storm has sheltered me,

Beneath the wing of Thy benignity.

A thousand write upon the beds of pain,

I have—no pleasure flows through every vein;

Wishes a thousand—wishes many, wait for hand;

I carried by ten thousand mercies stand;

How can I praise Thee, Father! how express

My debt of reverence and of thankfulness,

A debt that no intelligence can count.

While every moment swells the vast amount,

And every night more to its sum adds length;

And how my grateful bosom feels would raise

A fresh memorial to Thy glorious praise.

VARIETY.

The first faults are theirs who commit them. All the following are his who doth not punish them.

To do good still make no delay; for life and time glide fast away.

The best of game is, to do one's business, and talk little of it.

Three things only are well done in haste—flying from the plague, escaping quarrels, and catching fleas.

The best armor is to keep out of gun-shot.

The good woman doth not say, "Will you have this?" but gives it you.

That is a good misfortune, which comes alone.

The world is a cage of fools.

The more you think of dying, the better you will live.

A SCHOOL OF WHALES.—What do whales want of a school?—To swim.

To learn to speed! They are the greatest spouters in the world—except, perhaps, some of our noisy congress men.—Exchange.

Every man deems that he has precisely the trials and temptations which are the hardest of all for him to bear; but they are so, because they are the very he needs.

At the great donkey show in London, the prizes, consisting of nineteen cups, were all taken by one man. Not that he was the greatest donkey, but he stole them.

Many persons look upon themselves as struggling to benefit the world, when, in fact, the world looks upon them as struggling only to benefit themselves.

FARMER PRINCES.—There are some plain Illinois farmers who own more land than goes to make up some German principalities.

"Do you enjoy going to church now?" asked a lady of Mrs. Postington. "Low man, I do," said Mrs. P., "nothing does me so much good as to get up on Sunday morning and go to church and hear a popular preacher dispense with the gospel."

A modern philosopher gives several patent reasons why a man should never marry for money, but an old epicurean argues the case very pleasantly on the other side. He says:

"Whether a man marry, Croesus said,
Take one rich widow or rich maid;
For any wife may turn on ill;
But, and! the money never will!"

PARTS OF SPEECH.—It is asserted that in the English language proper, apart from technical and scientific terms, there are 29,500 nouns, 40,000 verbs, 20,000 adjectives, 8,000 verbs, 2,000 adverbs, 60 prepositions, 19 conjunctions, 68 interjections, and two articles. According to Webster's Dictionary, there are one hundred thousand words in the language.

EDUCATION AND OCCUPATION.—It is stated that of the 600 convicts who now occupy the Penitentiary, 511 cannot read, 149 can read, 400, or nearly 60 per cent. of the entire number, have no trades. This state of ruin is full of meaning. It at once admonishes and instructs. There are two great essentials for success in life—education and regular occupation.

WHAT WILL RUIN CHILDREN.—To have parents exercise partiality. This practice is lamentably prevalent. The first born is the last, the only son or daughter, the beauty and wit of the household, is too commonly set apart. J. Seph. like

To be frequently put out of temper. A child used to be spared, as far as possible, all just cause of irritation; and never be punished for doing wrong by taunts, cuffs, or rifle.

To be suffered to go uncorrected to-day is the very thing for which punishment was inflicted yesterday. With as much reason might a watch which should be wound back half the time, be expected to run well, as a child thus trained, to become possessed of an estimable character.

To be corrected in accidental faults with as much severity as though they were done intentionally.

The child who does ill when he meant to do well, merits pity, but not upbraiding.—The disappointment of its young protector, attendant on the disastrous failure of any little enterprise, is of itself, sufficient punishment, even where the result was brought about by carelessness. To add more is as cruel as it is hurtful.

Parents who give a child to understand that he is burdened to them, need not be surprised, should they one day be given to understand that they are burdensome to him.

SALADS AND SUMMER SOUPS.—Physiological research establishes the fact that acids promote the separation of the bile from the blood, which is then passed from the system, thus preventing disease of Summer. All fevers are "bilious"; what the bile is in the blood. Whatever is cooling, whatever relieves a fever is cooling. It is common saying that fruits are "cooling," and also berries of every description; it is the acid quality which they contain aids in separating the bile from the blood. Hence the great yearning for greens and lettuce, and salads, in the early Spring, these being eaten with vinegar. Hence, also, the taste for something sour, for lemons, on an attack of fever. But this being the case, it is easy to see that we nullify the good effects of berries in proportion as we eat them with sugar, or even with sweet milk or cream. If we eat them in their natural state, fresh, ripe, perfect, it is almost impossible to eat too many, or to enough to hurt us, especially if we eat them alone, and not taking any liquid with them whatever. Hence, also, is butter-milk, with a touch of milk, promotive of health in Summer time. Sweet milk tends to biliousness in sedentary people; sour milk is antiseptic. The Greeks and Turks are passionately fond of milk. The shepherds use rennet, and the milk dealers aim, to make it sour the sooner. Butter-milk acts like watermelons on the system.—Hall's Journal of Health.
